Spending most of a career conducting a first rate choir must be just about the most wonderfully creative and joyous existence imaginable. It has also been challenging, staying at least one step ahead of some of the most intelligent and talented young people in society. However, I think that the most special feature of the Chamber Singers for me is the fact that it was never required by any programme. Members of the group were there because they wanted to be. I have had the great pleasure of working with the best majors on any number of instruments in addition to voice, I’ve had the innovative composers and academics, who joined to broaden their musical experience. I’ve had the budding music educators who wanted to experience a good vocal ensemble. What I didn’t have were music students who were only there for the one unit credit. Clearly some joined because of the tours and rumours of a good social environment, but all worked hard toward the single primary goal of making the Chamber Singers one of our country’s premiere vocal ensembles. I offer my profound thanks to all of you singers who endured me for anywhere from 1 to 7 years, and to the University administrators who provided so much moral and financial support over the years and showed us in so many ways how much the Chamber Singers are appreciated within the University Community.

- Bruce More, Conductor

Reviews & Comments

Admirable without reservation, like fire on a frozen mirror. What clarity, what ensemble, this is perfection! (Admirons sans restriction, du feu dans un miroir glace. Quelle transparence, Quel ensemble, C’est la perfection!)

C.M. Bourque, CBC Festival Adjudicator.

Rather than being a choir of one basic sound like Kings College Cambridge, the remarkable uniqueness of this youthful group is that it is several choirs in one. The dramatic changes in tone colour were exploited not for gimmicks but for deeply thought out interpretations. An enormous versatility in timbre... The finest choir I have ever heard here was the Swedish Chamber Choir. This virtuostic Canadian choir wasn’t too far from that level.

Ian Dando, Critic: Christchurch Star and The Listener

In the concert at Mission Santa Clara with the San Jose State Choraliers (winners of the prestigious Choir of the World award at Llangollen, Wales in 1991), to be blunt, the Chamber Singers blew them away. Their strong pitch, tight ensemble, superb diction and clear line.. - Dr. Charles Barber, Assistant Professor of Music, Stanford University.

Of the many performances attended at Pruis Hall this past year, Saturday evening’s University of Victoria Chamber Singers concert was definitely in a class all its own. This highly entertaining ensemble from Canada was versatile throughout, as its mixed-bag variety of selections showed a 21 piece ensemble that responded so effectively to even the tiniest motion of their conductor’s finger.

Bradford Meyerdiorks, Muncie Star.

...spectacular intonation, a stunningly virtuostic performance of Vaughan Williams’ Three Shakespeare Songs. -11/21/98; a performance (Tedesco’s Romancero Gitano) of stunning accuracy and tremendous élan..1/31/99; - One of this town’s very finest choirs.- the most extraordinary performance.... the formidably talented choir. ...the extraordinary UVic Chamber Singers.This is a rare opportunity to hear what is probably the city’s finest choir in a splendid vocal acoustic. - 11/08/01

St. John Passion: It was a performance of singular, one might almost say miraculous, coherence, it was a reading that engaged both the emotions and the intellect...an inimitable sense of freshness and discovery to the music; the parts were well balanced, lines were commendably clean, intonation impeccable and diction...excellent. - 4/21/02(Bernstein Mass); diction was so good that one could have transcribed the text perfectly....3/10/07
Deryk Barker - Victoria Times Colonist
