VICTORIA’S ATOMIC VAUDEVILLE BRING AWARD-WINNING PLAY HOME
UVic alumni head-up Phoenix season with Legoland

First developed as a University of Victoria directed studies project in 2004, Jacob Richmond’s hilarious off-beat comedy Legoland has traveled to theatre festivals across Canada and the United States to great public and media acclaim. This October, Richmond and Britt Small, partners in the successful Victoria theatre troupe Atomic Vaudeville, are bringing this play back to the theatre where it was first launched.

The University of Victoria’s Phoenix Theatre is proud to announce Legoland as the opening play of their 2008/09 season for their annual “Spotlight on Alumni,” running October 9 through 18, 2008.

A hit on the festival circuit from Vancouver to Toronto and New York to Los Angeles, Legoland has won awards for “Best New Play”, “Best Actress”, “Critic’s Choice,” “Festival Favorite” and “Pick of the Fringe.” Media reviews of their performances consistently exclaim “If you see nothing else at the Fringe, see Legoland!” They have also earned a spot in Toronto’s Theatre Passe Muraille programming later this fall.

“The Fringe circuit has proven to be a great venue for boosting emerging talent into the limelight. A lot of UVic theatre grads have successfully launched their careers through independent Canadian touring. We’re honored to be recognized for our success and it’s great to be bringing Legoland back to the Phoenix,” says Small.

Co-directed by Richmond (UVic studies ’03-04) and Small (MFA Directing ’04) with costume and set design by Janis Ward (MFA Design ’04), this wildly inventive and darkly funny coming-of-age tale features the talents of Celine Stubel (BFA ’02) and Amitai Marmorstein (BFA ’07) as the two siblings, Penny and Ezra Lamb.

The play presents itself as a contemporary vaudeville routine complete with ukulele, puppets and gangster rap. After an entanglement with the law, the Lamb teenagers have to make a presentation on juvenile delinquency to their social worker and you, the audience. Their action-packed tale takes them from their hippie upbringing to a uniform-enforced Catholic school in the big city world they call “Legoland” and across the continent on a Ritalin-funded odyssey in search of pop star Johnny Moon. “It’s manic fun, wickedly performed…” says Toronto’s Now Magazine.

Atomic Vaudeville, founded by Small and Richmond in 2004, produces monthly cabaret-style shows — a short-form mélange of theatre, music, song, dance, puppetry and sketch — that have become a cult hit in Victoria.

The Phoenix Theatre will host a special performance of Legoland with sign language interpretation for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing on Saturday, October 18 at the 2:00pm matinee featuring the internationally known deaf interpreter Nigel Howard and Victoria hearing interpreter Mary Warner.
